Wilson & Taylor Take Over Water Valley Canning Co.

Both Men Are Well Known Cannerymen of This Section; Plant Now Being Reconditioned

A deal was consummated this week by which Charles N. Wilson and Chap Taylor, both of Water Valley, became the new owners and operators of the Water Valley Canning Co. Mr. Wilson and Warren Johnson formerly operated the plant. Mr. Taylor has been operating another plant known as Taylor and Williams in Water Valley. I. N. Williams will be also associated with the new canning firm.

The Water Valley Canning plant is now being reconditioned, and made ready for the canning season just ahead. New machinery has been installed for handling spinach and mustard greens, and the plant is now ready to accept these for canning. Mr. Taylor stated this week.

The Water Valley Canning Co. was taken over by W. R. Craddock back in 1924, and the business of this firm has shown steady growth. A few years ago prior to his death Mr. Craddock turned over the canning plants at Water Valley and Barlow to Messrs. Wilson and Johnson. Mr. Wilson states that his Barlow plant will continue to operate, but will be under the management of his father and son.

The Water Valley plant is now contracting for ripe tomatoes to be this season. Mr. Taylor states. Around 400 acres will be needed, and top government supported prices will be paid. Growers are urged to sign up at once, and tomato seed are available now, with plants available later.

Some of the items to be canned by the Water Valley plant will be hominy, tomatoes, sweet potatoes, lima beans, pork and beans, green beans, spinach and mustard greens, and others will be added later.

Council Plans To Incorporate Highlands And Riceville

Discussion Continued on Installation of Water Meters; School Bonds Refunded.

Meeting in regular monthly session Monday night the Fulton city council went into a huddle on incorporation of Highlands, and the installation of water meters here. These matters have been claiming chief attention of local officials in recent weeks, and action is expected soon.

James Warren, city attorney, has been instructed to draw up an ordinance for the installation of water meters. This ordinance will then be taken up for further discussion at the next meeting.

Advisability of incorporating Highlands and Riceville, bringing them inside the city limits, has been before the council at several recent meetings. Advantages and disadvantages of the move have been discussed by council members, and by citizens living in Highlands and Riceville. A citizens group was to meet with the council Monday night, but such a meeting was postponed until further investigation is made of the proposal. If Highlands and Riceville are taken into the city, it is thought that the city will have to provide such facilities as are now available to other property owners in Fulton, like water mains and fire protection.

Fulton has shown rapid growth in recent months, and some plans must be worked out now with a thought to the future of the community. There is a critical need now for more houses, in both the residential and business districts, and the building program must go forward if the city expects to grow, for without housing, people who desire to live here will be compelled to seek residence elsewhere.

Highlands and Riceville offer ideal building areas for the future growth of the community, and incorporation should be a big step forward toward growth there. Incorporation of these communities would bring them into the city of Fulton, and should be of material help to this community, and to the city school system.

Fulton And South Fulton Officials Take Up Violations

Judge Lon Adams of Fulton And Mayor J. H. Lowe of South Fulton Drive Against Public Drunkenness

Judge Lon Adams of Fulton, and Mayor J. H. Lowe of South Fulton are out to break up public drunkenness and reckless driving in the twin-cities, if their action against violators recently is any indication.

In Fulton the following were fined early this week:

James Lee, $25 and costs; Jeff Lawrence, colored, $10 and costs; Noah Covington $15 and costs; Marion Morgan colored $10 and costs; M. C. Haley colored $10 and costs; James J. Gray, colored, $25 and costs.

Over on the South Side a number of cases have come up recently where the charge was for public drunkenness, and Mayor J. H. Lowe is also placing heavy fines.

Another form of law violation that is receiving close attention by local officials is reckless driving. Louis Armstrong received a fine of $100 this week for reckless driving.

Harris Fork Creek Survey Is Complete Plans To Frankfort

Creek Committee Has Done Everything Possible to Cut "Red Tape" and Get Work Started

Preliminary survey work and plans to prevent serious overflow of the Harris Fork Creek inside the city of Fulton have been completed, and forwarded to the Kentucky Highway Department at Frankfort, according to the local Creek Committee, composed of K. P. Dalton, Maxwell McAdams and Bob White.

It is believed that work on dredging and straightening out of the creek through Fulton will get underway soon. The project will be carried out by the City of Fulton. The Kentucky Highway Department, the Tennessee Highway Department and the Illinois Central Railroad. Every effort has been made to complete plans, and get work started as soon as possible.

K. P. Dalton said last week that work will start above Highway 45 in Missionary Bottom and continue near the Cess Pool south of town. Willows, junk and dirt will be removed from beneath the bridges and along the creek right-of-way in order to speed up flood waters as they pass through the city.

In recent years the flooding Harris Fork Creek has done more than $100,000 damage in the business and residential districts of Fulton, a recent survey showed. As the creek bed filled up the floods have reached higher levels, and the damage has been more serious each year.

WHAT PRICE INFLATION CONTROL?

A few months ago a regional OPA official circulated to all OPA offices in his territory a memorandum, entitled "Techniques of Interviewing." As its title implies, it was an instruction sheet to guide OPA investigators when questioning suspected rule violators. No Hitler secret police agent could have been more ruthlessly clever. The investigator was told in detail how to "get" his case. He was told to flatter his victim, agree with him, sympathize with him, discuss his hobbies, his family—if the case required harsh tactics, a war of nerves was advised. In the latter event, the recommended approach was a "slow, deliberate and methodical summation of facts as you go over each document, entry, or circumstance." The crowning imitation of the famous Hitler technique dealt with the subject of turning friends against friends—"point out to him that he is being played for a sucker—Each little pin point penetration that you make in the witness will make him want to sing to get even. When he sings—you write the music."

It is hard believe that an official government agent in the United States could have so forgotten the traditions of his country as to write the above. It is even harder to believe that it could have been condoned by his superiors until it was reproduced in the Congress-sional Record, whereupon they hastily retracted and condemned it, more because of the effect it might have on public opinion than because of its fundamental wrongness.

The most alarming part about our economic policeman, the OPA is that it is beyond our regular court of justice. The accused are "condemned"—in special courts, which alone is something new and dangerous—how dangerous is illustrated above.

Americans might well begin to ask themselves, What price inflation control?

NO TIME FOR HEROICS

Some of the most enthusiastic supporters of government control have been driven to the admission that control in itself will not stem the tide of inflation. There must be production—more production than anyone ever dreamed of before in this country—which is the same thing as saying that there must also be a terrific volume of distribution. Unless retail distributors can move production on to consumers, factories must soon close. In other words, government controls can succeed only by the grace of producers and distributors. If fine theories of control squeeze the latter too hard, control defeats itself.

An indispensable influence against rising prices, is the mass distributor. A chain store system that operates on a very narrow margin of profit will resist strongly any unnecessary price increase that may result in curtailed volume. High volume of sales must be maintained if the concern is to live. And today the entire distribution industry is essentially a high-volume, low-price machine, just a bare bulk of the nation's productive facilities. It is this mass producing and handling of goods that has given the United States an unprecedented standard of living.

Government officials who pose as anti-inflation crusaders fighting a lone battle to protect the people against "selfish" industry, too often do not understand the way America ticks, or they are deliberately making political capital out of a grave emergency.

MORE RUSSIAN BATTLES

Strangely enough the Russian government, which was saved from destruction so recently, has conducted its relations with the World in a rough and rowdy way. The Stalin government is not co-operating with the United Nations. Instead of trying to preserve the peace of the World the Soviet Union has adopted, this very month, a new 5-year plan, calling for increasing the Nation's production one and one-half times the pre-war level in the next five years, and providing for extensive research into atomic power.

The speeches by Winston Churchill were a clear warning to the American people that the Soviet government is endangering the peace of England.

If England was attacked by Russia, Uncle Sam wouldn't hesitate to throw in his hat. Doesn't the whole lay-out indicate that the United States Government might do well to quit talking about atomic energy—first by telling the World that it is our secret and nobody need be afraid we will use it, except for our own defense.

The United States has never started wars. But it has successfully finished two World Wars.

The United States will continue to be the greatest and most powerful Nation in the World. Russia, go roll your hoop!

YOUR PROBLEM TOO

The wave of strikes that hit our country in basic industries has taught the public one thing: that it has a very great interest in the problems of industry. The farmers of the Far West would soon be out of business if the products and services of plants located hundreds and thousands of miles away were shut off for any length of time. This interdependence of local enterprise, and, for lack of a better name, national enterprise, has been too long unrecognized. Local Chambers of Commerce, local business men and local voters have been inexcusably disinterested in affairs beyond the limits of their communities. They have sanctioned destructive political crusades against individual industries. They have shrugged with indifference for years as Federal control reached deeper and deeper into the coal industry, the power industry, the oil industry, the steel industry and dozen of other industries. They are beginning to pay the penalty for this lack of interest. Present strikes are due in no part to governmental policies, and they are but one of many disruptive influences on production, directly traceable to government.

A single industry, coal, can make or break the living standards of everyone in the United States. From coal comes a long list of divergent products used in every home and industry. Into the making of every ton of steel goes a ton of bituminous coal. It generates more than 62 per cent of all our electricity. And it powers 94 per cent of all our railroad locomotives—our whole civilization depends on coal.

TRACEABLE TO STRIKERS

Don't fall for the big, big shouting, promoted in official circles in Washington, that business is getting back to normal. There has been a business setback created by strikes, and while some settlements have been made other new strikes are being unwrapped.

The Government has promoted wage increase. The OPA is still leading the procession and keeping tough on prices. That doesn't balance. It is a half-way scheme that makes full reconversion impossible. The big break-down started with an unreasonable strike against General Motors. Settlement of that long struggle does not guarantee production of automobiles sufficient to meet the demands for many months to come.

The individual doesn't have to look very far to find out for himself that there is still a business setback right now and it will not recover in a hurry. Number one problem is not oil in Iran, snooty behavior in Argentina, or foreign trad. The real problem is to pull our own country out of the hole and get jobs and rehabilitation for GI boys and civilians. The Government is moving all too slow in these matters.

SAVING GARDEN SEED MAY SAVE FOOD LATER

It is never a good gardening practice to make food available for shipment abroad, say horticulturists of the U-T Extension Service. Over-use of seed often causes shortages, which reduce food production later in the year.

Gardeners who plant thickly so that the sprouting seed may more easily push through soil crusts can save seed by covering the seed with woods dirt, old sawdust, or peat moss. Special soil coverings like these are especially good for beets and carrots.

A pound of bush snap beans is likely to contain at least a thousand seeds. If these are planted two inches apart, the pound would plant 160 feet of row. Packets of seed vary, but they may contain, according to actual count, such numbers of 700 radish; 500 beet; 600 tomato; 3,000 carrot; 4,00 turnip. It is seen, therefore, that small purchases carefully planted tend toward economy and good gardening.

HEALTH, SAFETY GUARDED BY SPRING CLEAN-UP

Disease, accidents, and fires, the three big enemies of farm health, life, and property, can be trimmed down if not entirely put out of business by a thorough clean-up, fix-up campaign, say safety specialists of the Agricultural Extension Service, who are cooperating in the spring clean-up drive of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. All counties are asked to set their own date for the spring clean-up.

It is emphasized that spring clean-up week is a job for every member of the family, and the whole community. Here are some of the things that should go into each group's plans for the clean-up, fix-up campaign:

In the farm home clean up all debris, waste material, etc. Put everything in its place. In other farm buildings, watch for fire hazards, fix leaky roofs, check electric wiring; repair windows, decayed sills, and foundations. Keep steps and ladders in order. Remove nails and jagged boards that might cause injury to persons or to livestock.

County and home agents can supply publications on farm safety, all of which will help to keep the three worst saboteurs off the farm.

THE AMERICAN WAY

National Sunday School Week, sponsored by the Laymen's National Committee, will be observed the week of April 8 to 14. For those parents who carelessly have been disregarding the spiritual training of their children, here will be an opportunity to make an auspicious beginning of that education by sending them to Sunday School on Sunday, April 14th; and then having at long last awakened to their duty and to the vital necessity of religious education for their offspring, to keep up the good work by sending them to Sunday School regularly each Sabbath Day thereafter.

Last year, it was my great privilege an honor to have acted as moderator on a radio program, broadcast on behalf of Sunday School Week. One of the participants was the Honorable Matthew J. Troy, Judge of the Court of Special Sessions, New York City. Judge Troy's answer to a question I asked of him stamped itself indelibly on my mind. The question was: "Judge, do you believe that an early religious education helps to keep young people out of your court?" Here follows his reply:

"Yes, I know it does. I am in charge of the youthful offenders between the ages of 16 and 19 years; and it is both alarming and pathetic to see so many 'helpless' young people brought into our courts. I use the word 'helpless' advisedly, because they have been turned adrift in life without adequate preparation to meet life's trials and temptations.

"When we are at war, we properly subject our service boys to a long, severe and rigorous course of training in preparation for combat. They are taught the methods of fighting intelligently and effectively. They are shown how to destroy the enemy, and how, at the same time, to preserve their own lives. They learn how to discover booby-traps, mines, snipers, and all such dangers; and are readied for quick action in emergencies. Through such training our war casualties are kept at a minimum.

"Unfortunately we do not exercise the same good common sense on the Home Front—the casualty rate among our young people at home is appallingly high, because we toss them into life's bitter battle, without equipment, without training, and without the knowledge of its pitfalls and dangers, which an early religious training would give them. Unlike our trained service men, our young people at home go down in the first real engagement, and then it becomes a tough job to repair the damage.

"Of course, there are some young people brought into court who have had religious training; who like the careless and forgetful service man in battle, have forgotten their training. But, you can always do something with the boy or girl who has had the solid foundation of an early religious training.

"Yes, indeed, an early religious education for all our youngsters will not only pay dividends in good citizenship but in addition, it will save the taxpayers a lot of money by reducing crime."

Parents, alert your youngsters against life's "booby-traps" by starting them to Sunday School on Sunday, April 14th.

RECIPE OF THE WEEK

Although oils are requested for shipment overseas, salads should not be left out of menus, notes Miss Florence Imlay, specialist in foods at the Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics. A tasty cooked dressing will blend the flavors of vegetables as well as does mayonnaise.

Vegetable Salad
2 cups cooked lima or kidney beans
1 cup cooked peas
1 1-2 cups diced celery

1-2 cup shredded raw carrot
2 tablespoons chopped onion
2 tablespoons chopped green pepper or pimento
3 tablespoons chopped sweet pickle

If canned vegetables are used, cook them for 10 minutes, then chill thoroughly and combine with other ingredients. Add 3-4 cup salad dressing to which a tablespoon of horseradish is added, if desired.

Cooked salad dressing: Mix together 2 tablespoons sugar, 2 tablespoons flour, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1-2 teaspoon mustard, 1-8 teaspoon cayenne pepper. Add 2 whole eggs or 4 yolks and beat well. Stir in 1 cup water or milk. Cook slowly until thick, then add 1-2 cup vinegar in a fine stream, beating thoroughly. Add 2 tablespoons melted butter. Store in covered jar in refrigerator. To use, dilute with lemon juice or cream.

Menu: Fried ham, spring greens, vegetable salad, cornbread, butter and baked rice pudding with raisins.

I take sanctuary in an honest mediocrity. —Bruyere.

Governmental programs "never guarantee enough wealth for even that type of care, and real security never will come through governmental programs which make it unprofitable to be productive.

The massive importance of small business in our American life cannot be overlooked. According to Department of Commerce figures, small business in 1939 gave 8,000,000 jobs and produced $43,000,000,000 of goods and services. If small business should be sunk by the profit squeeze seemingly advocated by Washington brain-trusters, it will leave a hole big enough to sink our that will assure that the right things get made in the right quantities is price control by the American housewife.

It is the kind of price control that will get maximum production—with jobs and prosperity for all; the kind of price control that has made America great, and the only kind that can keep America great.

It is the kind of price control that compels producers to give the American housewife what she wants at a price she thinks is fair—that price control of competition is free markets.

People do not bid up prices when an avalanche of goods is coming into the market. They bid up prices only when they fear continuous and

So far the people as a whole have shown no inclination to squander their wartime savings. There has been no significant increase in war bond redemptions, no drawing down of savings accounts, no wild rush to convert money into goods.

The social security of every man woman and child in the United States is threatened by price controls which are building up a potent inflationary pressure, and by Federal deficit spending which, if continued, will cause inflation that can't be stopped.

Do-gooders have been baiting a mousetrap for the American people, with renunciations of everybody who differs with them.

Broad and bonafide social security can come only through productivity, and merican business stands squarely for taking care of those who are undernourished and those, who, through no fault of their own, are unemployed.

SUNDAY DINNER

Suggestions

CENTURIES ago, spinach was credited with possessing remarkable medical properties. Ancient Arabian physicians constantly recommended it as a cure-all. While time and science have removed any trace of the mysterious, housewives today continue to recognize spinach as one of the more nutritional green vegetables. Its high mineral and vitamin content make spinach greens a sound dietary food for young and old.

Modern distribution methods have helped the housewife in the preparation by bringing spinach to market in canned, frozen, or pre-washed and pre-packaged forms. If the fresh, loose variety is preferred, this can be simply prepared by following a few routine directions. To remove sand and grit, spinach should first be immersed in running water, then submerged in a large panful. Lifting the greens repeatedly from the pan, rather than pouring off the water, speeds the cleaning process.

Housewives have found that spinach can be a tasty as well as a healthy addition to the dinner menu, says the A & P Service for Home-Makers. The raw spinach leaves make a colorful salad ingredient, mixing well with other foods in tasty salad combinations.

Boiling in a small quantity of water is the basic method of cooking. Served in this fashion, spinach can appear on the dinner table with a wide range of seasonings, salt and pepper, a cream sauce, horseradish, vinegar, or topped by hard-boiled egg slices. A small amount of garlic or onion placed in the spinach water before cooking offers another appetizing flavor. For variety, spinach combines well with eggs to make spinach balls, or as a baked dish with a center of carrots or turnip.

For Sunday dinner, serve green spinach topped by sliced hard-boiled egg, a grilled ham slice, candied sweet potatoes, nutted orange jello and a beverage.

Help Crippled Children

She still walks with a slight limp, but her leg is straight, and she doesn't have to wear braces, or use walking sticks now. Eight-year old Anna Lee Coffee, Grayson, Carter County, is another one of hundreds such success stories, written in real life by the Kentucky Society for Crippled Children and the Kentucky Crippled Children Commission.

It was to the Commission Clinic at Lexington that a young mother, Mrs. John Coffee, brought her two year old daughter in October, 1940. A victim of a congenital crippling condition, Anna Lee's right leg was completely paralyzed. Examination was made, a long leg brace and surgical shoes were furnished by the Commission. At intervals the child returned for examination, brace repairs and new shoes. She improved to some extent, but in October, 1943, she was admitted to the hospital for muscle training. Four months this training continued before Anna Lee could leave the hospital in February, 1944, using walking sticks. She continued to report regularly for check-up examinations. In April, 1945 she was permitted to discard her crutches—and she is improving slowly to the point where she can romp and play like other children, to the point where, thanks to the Commission and the Society she will grow up into a happy, useful citizen.

Anna Lee's success story was made possible by the work of the Kentucky Crippled Children Commission, the official public agency providing treatment for crippled children under 21 whose parents cannot pay. But the Commission's work is made possible, partly, by the Kentucky Society for Crippled Children, which supplements the inadequate budget of the Commission, and assists the Commission in conducting clinics, providing hospitalization, appliances and special training. The Society is now conducting its annual drive for funds through special contributions and sale of Easter Seals. The goal for the state is $125,000.

THE PREACHER AS HERO

If the preachers of America who have attracted folk attention were discussed adequately, it would require a stout volume. In the very earliest days the preachers were certainly very powerful in New England, more powerful than the politicians themselves, but with the exception a few none could be regarded as folk heroes. Probably Cotton Mather could be so regarded, but even he so availed himself of printer's ink that it was always easy to find documentary evidence as to what he was and what he thought. He was not the kind that appeals to the folk, anyway, for he was a good politician, a good local czar. Brainy he may have been, industrious he certainly was, but there was no hazy atmosphere about him that made the folk regard him as a saint or an incarnate demon. Jonathan Edwards almost became a folk hero, with his brilliant writings, even in what was becoming a lost cause, predestination. Turned out of his pulpit, he became for a time a missionary to the Indians, at the very period when he was writing some of his most logical and characteristic treatises. And then, just as fortune smiled again and he was called to the presidency of Princeton, he fell a victim to smallpox while still quite young. But his brilliant defense of a passing institution came to be looked on with sorrow by the very ones who would have glorified him if he had taken the other side. His contemporaries, such as Franklin and Jefferson, live on today in educated and illiterate lore alike.

It was really not until the great frontier preachers came along that the preacher assumed folk-hero proportions. Such picturesque characters as Francis Asbury captivated the East long before the spectacular preaching of Lorenzo Dow and Peter Cartwright in the West. The long, long rides of the early circuit riders and their incessant activity read today like fairy tales. Even the scouts themselves had hardly had such far-flung adventures. Lorenzo Dow's life sounds like a combination of the adventures of Davy Crockett and Mike Fink plus the missionary journeys of St. Paul. Early in his career he became a half-mythical character, a sort of clairvoyant who knew everything knowable. Using his insight into human nature very effectively he allowed people to glorify his astuteness and tell stories about his uncanny judgment. Contemporary accounts of him make him picturesque in every way: very tall and slender, athletic as an Abraham Lincoln in the days when he silenced the bullies on the frontier, bearded like one of the old prophets. A sort of lone wolf in religion, he refused to be bound by the rules of any denomination, but he wrought as a traveling preacher as if driven by the zeal of a first-century Christian. Cartwright had many of the same characteristics and an even greater sense of humor. He, too, knew human nature and cannily used his knowledge to help establish moral order on the frontiers. No wonder such men became almost as mythical as John Chapman, whom everybody knows now as Johnny Appleseed.

From these wide-roving preachers it was but a step to the preachers who really had a set circuit that they followed, such ardent evangelists as the ones Edward Eggleston described in his novel The Circuit Rider. Poorly paid, subjected to every sort of humiliation by the bullies of the back country, worn out at an early age by incessant travel and improper food, victims of malaria and smallpox, they seem like ancient heroes battling the evil spirit of the marshes or the mephitic vapors issuing from a vent in a volcano. Few of them lived past middle age; a few years of this toil used up the best of them, who rarely could stand the long journeys of Bishop Asbury. But from their labors the crude frontier ceased soon to be the haunt of lawless fugitives from the more settled areas and took on some of the permanence of civilization. Today it seems a far cry from Lorenzo Dow and Francis Asbury and Peter Cartwright, but who can tell how much of their work, actual and mythical survives in the stability of the communities where they labored so hard?

EASTERTIDE PLACES EMPHASIS ON THE RISEN CHRIST

For the past few weeks this special page has been directed upon the importance of our churches to the growth and welfare of our community, and our nation. At this approaching Eastertide, churches of this vicinity are preparing for special Services in commemoration of the risen Christ. Ministers will bring messages from passages in the Bible, and thousands of people will attend Sunday School and church services Easter morning and evening. It is this sacred faith and devotion to the teachings of the Master that has bound all the peoples of America together down through the years. It will be this self-same faith and belief that will bring greater unity and understanding among all the peoples of the world. Education and enlightenment will direct the minds of the peoples along lines that are harmonious and conducive to happiness everywhere—beating back darkness and oppression, and liberating these peoples so that they, too, shall carry forward the torch of real religious understanding.

Cayce Homemakers

The Cayce Homemakers met March 27, at the home of Mrs. Charlie Bonduant. The meeting was called to order by Mrs. Guy Johnson, vice president, in the absence of Mrs. Billy McGehee, president.

Miss Margaret Howard gave a report of Advisory Council, and announced that the District Homemakers meeting will be held April 29 at Mayfield.

Mrs. Lyle Shuck gave the rocking chair tour of Venezuela.

The landscape notes for March was given by Miss Alice Sowell, she discussed removing dead branches of the shrubs, transplanting shrubs and trees, removing winter mulch from the roses and sowing flowers seed in boxes indoors, hot beds or cold frames.

The major project lesson, "Sleeves" was given by Mrs. Thelbert Sowell, she illustrated sleeve principles to keep in mind, she discussed setting in sleeves, and padding for sleeves. Current fashion requires some padding in all sleeves. Mrs. Sowell had patterns for sleeve pads. The women enjoyed making the pads that would give their garments a professional look. A pattern for a Tailors Ham for pressing sleeves was also given the women.

Mrs. W. B. Sowell led the recreation program which consisted of a song and game.

Twelve members were present. The next meeting will be held Mrs. Guy Johnson April 24 at 1:30 p. m.

A MATTER OF MIGHT

There is one thing that is never discussed publicly in connection with strikes which are called to the detriment of the whole nation — namely, the right to work.

Today, labor unions calmly announce when they strike that picket lines will be established, and any man crossing such line will do so at his peril. And men who want to work are not allowed to "cross" that line. Apparently there is no political will on the part of Federal, state or municipal government to protect non-striking or non-union workmen in their constitutional right to work unmolested.

Suppose, however, you, as an individual did not like a clerk in some store, and decided to become a one-man picket and prevent that clerk from entering the store. You would land in jail as quickly as a policeman could be called.

The moral seems to be that right to maintain picket lines and prevent men from working is not so much a matter of law as a matter of might. If you are big enough, you can defy the law—if you are small enough, you are subject to the law. What a travesty on justice in a nation which boasts of freedom.

Home Demonstration Week Set For May 5-12

"Today's Home Builds Tomorrow's World's" is the theme of National Home Demonstration Week which will be observed May 5 to 12 by rural women throughout the United States, Alaska, Hawaii, and Porto Rico. Observance of the week will focus attention on the contribution of the home and family toward progress and world peace.

Local Home Demonstration Clubs, cooperating with their home agent, are asked to plan observance of the week to point up special achievements or interests in their own communities. Currently, there are more than 1,800 Home Demonstration Clubs in Tennessee, with membership totaling more than 44,122.

Last year some 68,000 farm homes and 16,000 non-farm home in Tennessee recorded changed practices resulting directly from the Home Demonstration Work. More than 12,000 local Home Demonstration leaders volunteered time and effort in carrying out community programs for "better homes on better farms."

Home demonstration work, starting with tomato canning in a few Southern communities in 1913, has been expanded to include almost every phase of home life. In addition to foods and nutrition, clothing, household management and home furnishings, and handicrafts and recreation, rural families are asking home demonstration agents for help with the solution of problems in such fields as health and medical care, housing, farm and home financial planning, work simplification in the home, consumer education, child care, community welfare, and citizenship responsibilities.

TAXATION

Not so many years ago, government had little or no financial interest in strikes. But, today, it has a greater interest in the income lost by industry than has the factory owner, in one way, because it takes the lion's share of net profits, in taxes. Strikes of the past year have cost the government a fabulous sum.

Such tax losses help make it more difficult to ease the general tax load. Therefore, we all pay more taxes than might otherwise be necessary.

For this reason alone, government should have a very great interest in perfecting plans to curb strike losses to the benefit of itself, the workers and the consumers—the latter two being the source of all income to government.

Tobacco Penalties Are Increased

A recent amendment to the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 provides for increased penalties on fire-cured and dark air-cured tobacco marketed in excess of the 1946 farm marketing quota, according to H. M. Pewitt, chairman of the Fulton County AAA Committee. The new penalty rate is set at 40 percent of the average market price for the previous year's crop. On the basis of a current season's average price of 32 cents per pound for fire-cured and 25 cent per pound for dark air-cured, chairman, Pewitt explained, penalty rates for excess tobacco of the 1946 crop will be 13 cents per pound for fire-cured and 10 cents per pound for dark air-cured. In the past, the penalty on excess fire-cured and air-cured tobacco has been five cents per pound.

"This increase in the penalty rate was deemed advisable in order to strengthen the marketing quota program on these types of tobacco," Mr. Pewitt said. "Marketing quotas were provided on these two kinds of tobacco by the Congress, and were voted into effect by growers in a referendum last summer. The tremendous majority of growers voting in favor of quotas indicates that they want the marketing quota program made as effective as possible."

Acreage allotments for 1946 are based on those in effect in 1943, last year in which the program applied to dark air-cured and fire-cured tobacco, with specific acreages provided for adjusting established allotments and granting allotments to "new" farms on which no tobacco has been grown in the past five years.

In addition, Mr. Pewitt said, it recently was announced that all 1946 acreage allotments for fire-cured tobacco will be increased by 20 percent and all allotments for dark air-cured will be increased by 10 percent.

To further strengthen the program, he said funds had been made available by the Congress and plans now were being formulated to measure all acreages of fire-cured and dark air-cured tobacco on all farms in 1946.

Save Feed By Selling Non-Laying Hens

Selling non-laying hens from the flock and using the feed for chicks provides one means by which poultry raisers can help solve the mounting feed problem, says A. J. Chadwell, U. T. Extension poultry specialist. The shortage of feed is already acute in some areas, necessitating the best possible use of whatever supplies are available.

A larger percentage of the hens should be sold now than in normal years, owing to the tight feed situation, since pullets will be depended upon for an egg supply in the fall and early winter months, when the demand is greatest and prices are best. A further feed saving can be effected by turning pullets on clean range, which has the added advantages of lower mortality rate, less bother from parasites and disease, and a greater egg production.

Was On Liquid Diet, Retonga Brings Relief

He Eats Anything He Wants Now, Says Mr. Autry And Has Regained 20 lbs. Feels More Like Old Self Than In Years

"No person in the U. S. A. feels more grateful to Retonga than I do," declares Mr. John Autry of Rosine, Ky. Mr. Autry was wounded and gassed during world War I. He is a respected machinist and formerly served as notary public in the Rosine district.

"At times," said Mr. Autry, "it seems that the pressure of gas in my stomach would almost cut off my breath. I tried different medicines and treatments but in one two-week period I lost 20 lbs. Severe constipation developed, I felt exremely restless, and lots of nights I could sleep only an hour or two. I felt so weakened I could hardly get around the house. I suffered from nervous indigestion and heartburn and was practically living on liquid foods and raw eggs.

"Within a week after I started using Retonga I could eat any kind of food I desired. I have regained twenty pounds. I now rest well and constipation has been relieved. I feel that I would not be here if I had not found Retonga and I wish I could tell every one of the relief it brought me."

Retonga is intended to relieve distress due to insufficient flow of digestive juices in the stomach, loss of appetite, Vitamin B-1 deficiency and constipation. Accept no substitute. Retonga may be obtained at DeMyer's Drug Store.

"THE TEACHER AS HERO"

Among the American folk heroes that have received some literary treatment the teacher does not rank very high, but there has been a great oral tradition that may some day be utilized for literary material. Many of the actual teachers who have made American book-conscious are almost as much traditional as historical. Probably no one is more a folk hero than William Holmes McGuffey, who literally taught most of America to read. Thought a very flesh-and-blood man to his contemporaries in educational circles, he was to most of the millions who studied his books a mere name, a sort of Chibiabos the Musician in HIAWATHA, who "Sang in accents sweet and tender, Sang in tones of deep emotion, Songs of love and songs of longing."

If someone had told us at Fidelity that the maker of our books was a real man, I feel that we would have felt slightly disappointed. McGuffey seemed to us like St. Paul and the other Bible writers; since he and they were dear before I was born, I assumed that they were all contemporaries, living in a glorious past when everything was perfect, when man had not strayed so far from his divinity as men seemed to have done in Fidelity and its adjoining neighborhoods.

In education circles Horace Mann also assumed a prominent place that we are just beginning to realize was his just desert. I know no folklore about him, but my own school, a sort of grandchild or great-grandchild of his, developed from its earliest days a kind of folklore that must have been inspired by Mann and his followers. Older people that I knew at Western spoke of the old National Normal University at Lebanon, Ohio, as if he were "the voice of one crying in the wilderness." Anecdotes about such great educators as Alfred Holbrook circulated daily. Professor A. W. Mell, who started the school that grew into Western, the Glasgow Normal School, was a living folk hero, an inspirer of youth, almost unreal even when he was with us in the flesh as a visitor long after I became a teacher at Western. His most inspired pupil, Henry Harlin Cheery, acquired folk-hero status long before he died in 1937. The tradition of the great system of colleges to educate teachers was a species of hero-worship that caught and made many a man who otherwise might never have been worthy of more than very local reputation. I have felt since I first knew about Horace Mann that probably this reforming fever, came from him.

Too much has been made in some circles of the eccentric pedagogus who knew little but taught it dominantly for half a century. Probably no one has yet done justice to the solid old teacher who taught the free school in the fall and a subscription school in the spring and in his time covered an entire county and helped in the education of two or three generations. Teachers belong to a profession that has an immense turnover. Those who remain teachers throughout all the years deserve to become traditions, to become for many people the incarnation of the subjects they taught. In the one-room school days that all old-timers knew, nearly every neighborhood had the eccentric but often thorough instructor of some teacher who kept at his task, rod in hand, until he had given many successive groups of children insight into Ray's Third-part Arithmetic, Webster's Blue-back Spelling Book, and Harvey's Grammar. Often such a neighborhood pedagogue, went to seed on one thing: arithmetic or grammar or American history. He had his own ways and tolerated few others. In my part of the world he was always Southern in history and wined when any Southern general was presented as less than a god. He drove grammar rules into our heads, sometimes with physical strength, but he rarely listened at our use of the rules afterwards. By maintaining orderliness in everything, he taught us more respect for authority than all our knowledge of civil government gave us.

This is the teacher who has become the folk hero for many of us.

Silo Simpkins Says

There is no ceiling on the price of farm accidents.

Good feeding encourages pigs to make hogs of themselves.

Accidents on the farm can be reduced by simple precautions which eliminate "happening" places.

Bonuses can be paid to laying hens with prior approval—in the form of better feeding, and care.

One year in the laying flock is a ripe old age for a hen unless she has proved herself an exceptional layer.

Perhaps it would be fowl language to say that crushed limestone and oyster shell are convenient forms of "layer cake."

As hens show signs of "feather-bedding" on the egg production line they should be measured for a new dressing, with dumplings.

Seventeen thousand lives are lost in farm accidents every year, which reminds that the most unexpected accidents happen in the most expected places.

Mother Nature can do a good job of drying hay in the field. But she can also do a lot of "moistening," which emphasizes the advantages of a barn hay drier.

Plot now to nip insects before they get into the bud.

Think not of livestock success in the past, but in the pasture.

Take care of your soil so that it can continue to take care of you. It's a wise civic organization that encourages community improvement in its area.

To do best work and reduce loss of time, keep farm machinery in good running condition.

When a playing hen eats feed that should go to a laying hen, she is sticking her neck out.

Good laying hens should be put on the electric range.

It's a neat trick when any farmer can build up his bank account without first building up his soil.

Plowing a straight furrow is ethically correct, but a curved furrow is often better in land management.

Since comfortable contented cows give more milk, good shelter for the herd is cheaper than extra feed.

When our hatred is too keen, it places us beneath those we hate.—La Rochefoucauld.

The doctrines of grace humble man without degrading him and exalt him without inflating him.—Charles Hodge.

There is nothing so clear sighted and sensible as a noble mind in a low estate.—Jane Porter.

SUNDAY, APRIL 7
CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Unreality" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all Christian Science Churches throughout the world on Sunday, April 7, 1946.

The Golden Text is: "There is that maketh himself rich, yet hath nothing: there is that maketh himself poor, yet hath great riches." (Prov. 13-7)

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "Say to them that are of a fearful heart, Be strong, fear not; behold, your God will come with vengeance, even God with a recompence; he will come and save you. Then the eyes of the blind shall be opened and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped. Then shall the lame man leap as an hart, and the tongue of the dumb sing: for in the wilderness shall waters break out, and streams in the desert." (Isa. 35)
